The Foundation's 2019 Grantee Perception Report includes valuable feedback from grantees on their experiences with us – highlighting both positive trends and opportunities for improvement.

The confidential survey was conducted by the Center for Effective Philanthropy, a nonprofit that provides funders with tools to improve overall foundation performance. A total of 426 grantees were surveyed on topics like impact and understanding of grantee communities, quality of interactions, communications, grant process and more. This is the fourth Grantee Perception Survey the Foundation has conducted since 2008 in partnership with the Center for Effective Philanthropy.

Findings from the survey offered important insights on how well we are living into our organizational values, our cornerstones and our aspirations for practicing philanthropy. The information provided in the recent report helps to inform how we work and engage with you in our collective efforts to bring health in reach for all Coloradans.

The data paints a picture, and results from survey respondents were rich in perspective – showcasing both positive trends and opportunities for improvement.
